

Elk Island Catholic Schools are Allergy Aware

To our ABJ Community,

Our School, along with all Elk Island Catholic Schools, supports allergy aware environments where students, staff, and families share the responsibility of ensuring a safe and caring environment for all children.

Each year schools experience episodes of severe food allergies, specifically nut allergies, we ask that families be considerate and supportive by avoiding the sending of food with nuts or nut products in them to our school.

In fostering the care and responsibility of all members of our school community, particularly those with allergies and their classmates, we acknowledge that education is key to developing consistent habits with regard to hand washing, food preparation, food sharing and other areas of food management that limit as much as possible the risks of cross-contamination that can occur via doorknobs, desktops, or bathrooms.

In order to ensure that students with life-threatening nut/peanut allergies feel comfortable and have the opportunity to be a part of and not excluded within the school setting, we ask that students and parents do to the best of their ability make sure that all food items are nut free.

As an inclusive caring Catholic community, we want to ensure that teachers, students, parents, administrators and any other people affiliated with the school have the information, procedures and support needed to a successful educational experience for everyone in our collective care.

We appreciate your empathy and understanding.

Mr. Brett Cox
Principal